PHILOSOPHY

Performance combined with DESIGN and FUNCTIONALITY

Research and development have always been at the core of our approach. We continuously experiment with materials, technologies and construction techniques, shaping each product around its function.

RRD – Roberto Ricci Designs was born from the sea. From these origins, we developed a culture driven by performance and innovation, researching and applying the most advanced technologies to materials and transferring this expertise into a clothing line designed to explore new horizons.

Our DNA lies in the ability to combine material research with the function of the final product. We do not pursue aesthetics as an end in itself: for us, form, performance and technology are all part of the same creative process.

We call this attitude Perf-Romance: the meeting point between performance and passion, technical culture and the pursuit of beauty.

This vision has enabled us to build a distinctive and recognizable identity in the world of clothing, bringing together technical expertise and elegance, forms and materials, treatments and colors through our own interpretation of Italian style.

SURFLEX®

FROM WATER TO URBAN LEGEND

Challenge is in the nature of RRD – Roberto Ricci Designs. Aware of our heritage and committed to technologically advanced future projects, we are redefining urban apparel.
By using materials and fabrics derived from water sports, we strive to become increasingly contemporary—because the most meaningful challenges are the ones we set for ourselves!

Our SURFLEX®, eco-friendly, unique and unmatched, embodies two enduring qualities: patented authenticity and certified sustainability.
It is a technical fabric with a super matte appearance that recalls more traditional textures. Compact, soft, and versatile, it is the ideal material for creating refined garments that are easy to wash and require no ironing.

- EASY CARE
- QUICK DRYING

TECHNOLOGIES

LASER CUTTING

To achieve a new level of lightness without compromising garment performance, RRD chooses to eliminate unnecessary fabric. To reach this goal, selected pieces in the collection are cut using innovative laser techniques that preserve the integrity of the fabric composition while enabling clean, precise edges. These can then be assembled using non-invasive methods such as bonding and taping.
Laser cutting is a technique that allows for accurate and clean fabric cuts, using heat to seal the edges and prevent fraying or excess threads.

GLUING

The bonding of two fabric panels is carried out by overlapping two edges of the material: the lower layer, onto which a strip of adhesive is applied (approximately 8–12 mm wide), and the upper layer, which is pressed on top under heat ranging from 250 to 300°C. This type of assembly does not involve any preliminary stitching to join the two edges (as is the case with taping) and is performed directly on raw-cut fabric.
In addition to eliminating the use of thread, this technique allows the garment to be completely waterproof.

TAPING

Taping can be applied either to two fabric panels whose edges are stitched together using thread and a sewing machine (S&T – Stitched and Taped), or to panels joined using ultrasonic welding (USW&T – Ultrasound Welded and Taped). In the first case, its function is to waterproof the seams; in the second, to enhance tensile strength.
It consists of a heat-applied taping process using a tape made from various materials. Typically, the same fabric as the garment is used, but nylon or polyamide tapes can also be applied.
The tape is coated with a heat-sensitive adhesive that, when reaching temperatures between 250 and 300°C, bonds perfectly to the underlying fabric, creating a fully waterproof assembly.

ULTRASOUND WELDING

It is an innovative construction technique that replaces traditional stitching. Fabric panels are fused together using an ultrasonic system, leaving the material free from needle holes.
To reinforce this bond, a tape is applied, making the outer shell more durable and fully waterproof.

W26502 | Surflex Winter Long Wom Jkt

The Surflex Winter Long Wom Jkt is the ultimate piece of outerwear, capturing the essence of an urban winter with its perfectly balanced blend of functionality and style. Its sleek, clean silhouette flows effortlessly over the body, embodying contemporary, natural sophistication. The above-the-knee length amplifies its visual impact, transforming a technical garment into a true seasonal statement piece. The soft, enveloping hood elegantly frames the face, blending protection and allure. Crafted from breathable, waterproof membrane Stratofabric #3, it confidently defies cold and rain. The SURFLEX® exterior, with its extra-matte finish, complements the tubic channels housing the 90/10 duck down filling, offering warm, impalpable, and undeniably chic comfort. Side pockets with invisible zippers and the signature black, micro-injected logo on the sleeve complete the design with a subtle, refined touch that is perfectly in line with its minimalist and recognizable look.

This winter coat exudes unique elegance with its contemporary take on layering, blending two distinct styles. Designed to be worn together or separately, it effortlessly transitions between seasons. The coat is defined by a belt that accentuates the silhouette and is crafted from double wool cloth, offering enveloping warmth and a rich, dense texture. The vest, featuring a small lapel collar, adds a technically sophisticated dimension with its matelassé effect, 90/10 seamless duck down padding, and closure with two oversized designer buttons, highlighting its exclusive character. The versatile and sophisticated Big Duck Over Coat Wom Jkt allows for multiple style interpretations. On autumn days, the vest can be worn alone or paired with chinos for relaxed, contemporary elegance. During the harshest winter days, layer the two pieces for a warm and striking look over a masculine-cut, oversized shirt from the collection in a vivid color palette.
